“What Governments can Do about Corporate Social Responsibility”

SPEAKERS

Senator Penny Wong

Labor Senator for South Australia,
Shadow Minister for Employment and Workforce Participation, Shadow
Minister for Corporate Governance and Responsibility

Paul Hohnen

Principal, Sustainability Strategies of Amsterdam, special ACCSR guest

MODERATOR

Leon Gettler, Editor, Enlightened
Self-Interest Column, The Age

Senator Penny Wong is a member of the Parliamentary Joint Committee on Corporations and Financial Services, and initiated the inquiry into corporate responsibility in Australia, which is scheduled to release its report in June.

Paul Hohnen is an international advisor to governments on sustainability and corporate responsibility matters, and has played senior roles in the Australian diplomatic service, Greenpeace International and the Global Reporting Initiative.

This breakfast event will critically examine fall-out from the JPC Inquiry and consider the future of government policy frameworks for corporate social responsibility.

“The debate about corporate responsibility reflects Australians’ aspirations for an equitable and sustainable society. The best thing government can do is develop a broad policy response that encourages companies to make responsible, far-sighted development of our shared resources the centre of their activities.”

– Senator Penny Wong

“If government wants to get the best out of business, it needs to ensure it has the right framework for monitoring and encouraging best performance. The official signals on CSR – and the wider issue of sustainable development – are unclear.”

– Leeora Black and Paul Hohnen, “Embrace the Positive Power of Business”,
The Age, 6 April 2006.
